Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 30 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Heavy rain spreads north tonight. Breezy in the south.

This Evening and Tonight:
Largely dry at first this evening before cloud and rain soon spread in from the south. Winds strengthening overnight across the south of the region as rain continues, turning heavy at times. Mild. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Friday:
Fresh and gusty winds on Friday, accompanied by cloud and outbreaks of rain during the morning. However, it should become drier and brighter through the afternoon. Remaining very mild. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Unsettled and often windy, with showers or longer spells of rain. However, there will be some brighter spells too, most likely on Sunday. Very mild at first but becoming colder.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.